Re: West Lake Landfill Superfund Site,
Bridgeton, Missouri -- Information Request

Dear Ms. Newman:

Please be advised that I now have responsibility on behalf of The Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Company for the West Lake Landfill superfund site in Bridgeton, Missouri. I would appreciate your substituting my name for that of Ms. Buenger on your contacts list.

Separately, this letter is intended to supplement The Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Company's response to EPA's Information Request in connection with this matter, which response was dated April 15, 1994.

In our response we concluded that waste Cascade automatic dishwashing product, a waste about which we provided information, was nonhazardous based on a Total Waste Analysis (TWA). The TWA indicated that chloroform levels in the waste were at such low concentrations that toxicity characteristic regulatory limits could not possibly be met or exceeded. We continue to be convinced of the accuracy of the TWA results. Because of the anomalous result of the substance's TCLP analysis (also provided in our response), however, it could appear that our interpretation may not be the only reasonable interpretation of all the test data.

Very truly yours,

Margaret W. Dewan
